What is a treatment area in an EMS Station?

Treatment areas in EMS stations are designed with patient comfort and staff efficiency in mind. Rooms are spacious enough to accommodate essential medical equipment and personnel movements, with ergonomic furniture to support staff during long shifts.

What should a fire and EMS Station do?

Practice emergency evacuation. In each of these areas, the fire and EMS station should serve as the model for the community. As with any public or private facility, fire and emergency services stations are subject to theft, vandalism and violence.

Should a fire and EMS Station serve as a model?

In each of these areas, the fire and EMS station should serve as the model for the community. As with any public or private facility, fire and emergency services stations are subject to theft, vandalism and violence. For staffed stations, these acts are most likely to occur when emergency response personnel are on a call.

What should a EMS Station include?

Another special space your station should include is a place for providers to exercise. Consider the specific workouts and equipment your providers are most likely to need and use. Where a firefighter might need to lift heavy weights, an EMS provider may be better served by a rowing machine, says Rodriguez.

What are Maryland's designated EMS base stations?

Maryland's designated EMS Base Stations provide quality on-line medical direction to the State's EMS clinicians. The following information comprises a toolbox for EMS Base Station staff to sustain and improve the quality of their programs.

Does Austin EMS have a Safe Sleep Room?

To address this, Austin EMS has also added safe sleep rooms to several of its stations. Austin-Travis County EMS Chief Ernesto Rodriguez says sleep and crew comfort are important elements of station design, and he says agency leaders ask medics what they want when building a new station.
